To whom it may concern;

While at Radiator, Ashley was always enthusiastic, hardworking, quick to learn and very committed to the task she was given.

During her time here she got a broad exposure to a wide variety of account executive roles and responsibilities and handled these exceptionally well and would certainly be able to take on more challenging work, making her an asset to any team.

Here at Radiator, we took her on in an account executive support role, through which she showed confidence, her ability to use her initiative and her proficient phone manner. Her daily duties included, supporting account executives with their allocated tasks, dispatching product, telephone work and media research. She was always professional, punctual and often went out of her way to help out at events which entailed working overtime.

She was also reliable, willing to learn and competent when given a task to complete, contributing positively to the daily running of the company.

I am sure that Ashley will be a great benefit for any future employer and we wish her well in the future.

Kind Regards

To Whom It May Concern:

This letter is written to recommend to you Ms Ashley Glover, a graduate of the advertising/public relations major at the University of Central Florida. It was my pleasure to be one of Ashley's instructors at UCF, and I am confident that she has the talent, the tools and the motivation to be an excellent public relations professional.

Her qualifications include her intellect, her education, her integrity and her ambition. Her major, ad/pr, was perhaps the most competitive major at UCF, with only 40 accepted from as many as 200 applicants each semester. Ashley was accepted on her first try. Once in the major, she quickly distinguished herself as one of the best and brightest, always having her work in on time and on target.

I have seen her writing skills, her critical thinking, her ability to express herself and her confidence demonstrated on a daily basis. I think she will bring those skills to her professional career as well.

She is a hard worker. She volunteers for the tough tasks, and acquits herself well. She was an eager and active member of our ad/pr club, Quotes, as well as in various volunteer activities on and off campus. She can multi-task without missing a beat.

Finally, her honesty, her trustworthiness and her sincerity make her a pleasure to be around. Popular with her peers, she demonstrated leadership and maturity throughout her college career. I know these traits will also translate into the workplace.

In short, Ashley Glover is an intelligent, diligent and trustworthy person. I'm pleased to recommend her to you.

Sincerely,

Frank R. Stansberry, APR, Fellow PRSA

To Whom It May Concern:

It is my pleasure to write a letter of recommendation for Ms. Ashley Glover. Ashley was in my spring 2005 Intermediate Foundations of Leadership class. She was also a mentor to first year LEAD Scholars in the Fall 2005 semester. Both classes required a substantial amount of self-discipline and responsibility. She is a self-starter and is always ready to lead, join in, or whatever is required of her. In both classes, Ashley performed wonderfully and maintained a special relationship with the students assigned to her. The entire fall 2005 class felt that Ashley was sincerely interested in their success as a LEAD Scholar, as a student, and as an individual. Any organization would be fortunate to have her on their team.

Ms. Glover is extremely good natured and optimistic. She lightens up a room just by arriving. She is connected to the pulse of student issues and very motivated to be an advocate and change agent. Her leadership skills will serve her internship position well due to her prior experience working with all types of people in the university community and community at large. Ashley is always approachable and ready to help; she is also very professional and respectful in her demeanor with everyone with whom she is in contact. I find her above reproach.

Ashley sets high goals for herself and will not stop until she achieves them. She approaches everything with enthusiasm and a 'can do' attitude. She is extremely dependable and well prepared. Ms. Glover has been a vital asset in representing the university in a positive and collegiate manner to any realm in which she must perform.

Please contact me if I can provide further information about Ms. Ashley Glover. She is a wonderful person and I know she will be a valuable asset to your organization.

Sincerely,

To Whom It May Concern:

I have had the pleasure of knowing Ashley Glover for 2 summers. As a person, Ashley is a very conscientious and caring individual. Her integrity, honesty and work ethics enabled her to successfully complete any tasks asked in superior fashion.

Having Ashley work for me at day camp as a counselor, I had numerous opportunities to witness and observe her in action. She had no problem adapting to changes in her job and the work environment as needed. When a different approach or method was needed, she always adapted easily to the situation. Working for 6 hours each day with a group of 16 campers is a challenge that Ashley accomplished with ease.

I have watched her interact with the campers and see the joy in all their faces. Ashley communicates not only a strong confidence in herself but also a confidence in others that encouraged them to perform their best. She has earned the respect and trust of others through her uncompromising integrity and openness.

Ashley Glover is a sincere individual who I would recommend for any position she is seeking. She would truly be an asset to your organization.

Sincerely,

Diane M. DiCerbo
